Self-Taught

I consider myself to be an ambitious front end developer. At the age of 4 I got my first computer, on it I learned to read, install games and fix bugs. From then until now, I have gathered a lot of experience in the art of using a computer efficiently. Along the way I developed an interest in game servers and the databases that come with them. I started learning computer science and programming when I realised that I enjoyed doing it and was extremely passionate about it. So, after countless sleepless nights spent on forums, courses, tutorials, and blogs, I've reached the point where I am now, with a lot of knowledge, but even more to learn.
